Definitions:

Sex: Refers to the physical and biological differences between men and women, such as reproductive capabilities (e.g., women can become pregnant or breastfeed babies, while men cannot).

Gender: Refers to socially constructed identities, attributes, or roles for women and men. It encompasses the ideas, perceptions, and expectations associated with being a particular gender and what behaviors are culturally expected. Gender roles are context-specific and can change over time.

Gender Equality: Gender equality exists when women and men enjoy the same rights and opportunities in all aspects of life, including decision-making, economic participation, and social standing. It implies that women and men are equally respected and valued in society and before the law.

Gender Balance: Refers to achieving an equitable representation of women, men, and other genders in various contexts or roles. It ensures a more diverse and inclusive environment.

Gender Stereotyping: Involves ascribing specific attributes, characteristics, or roles to individuals based solely on their gender. It becomes wrongful when it leads to human rights violations.

Gender Non-Conforming Persons: Individuals who do not conform to traditional gender norms, including behaviors, dress, or activities, associated with their assigned or perceived gender.

Gender Mainstreaming: The process of integrating a gender perspective into all aspects of planning, development, implementation, and evaluation of policies, programs, and projects. It aims to promote gender equality and identify and address gender-based disparities.

Sex-Disaggregated Data: Data that are collected and presented separately for women, men, and other genders. This approach highlights potential differences in outcomes, participation, or impacts based on gender.

Intersectional Approach: Recognizes that an individual's experience of oppression and discrimination is influenced by multiple social identities, including race, gender, sexuality, age, health status, ethnic origin, and class, among others.

Women Human Rights Defenders (WHRD): Women who actively promote and defend human rights. They often face increased levels of repression, violence, and discrimination due to their advocacy and are specifically vulnerable in their work.

Gender Focal Point: A designated individual within an organization responsible for overseeing and promoting gender mainstreaming efforts. They often receive specialized training in gender and human rights.

Harassment at Work: Unwanted behavior or actions, including sexual harassment, that create an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.
